

Last Man Standing – March / May 2009

Week 1 report - carnage at the first fence with no fewer than 17 fallers, which incredibly only leaves 14 runners on the long approach to the second fence (no Premiership matches next weekend due to the Internationals, so next matches are on weekend of 4th April). Man Utd's failure to beat Fulham took out a third of the field (including myself), but some good predicting on the 3 matches on Sunday provided a few more runners for the second round. See table below - if your name is in red I'm afraid you're out, but if you're still in don't forget to give me your next selection by noon on Friday 3rd April & remember you cannot choose the same team again.

Week 2 report - only 2 fallers here on Grand National Day with Spurs letting 2 of the lads down. Still 12 runners chasing the prize money

Week 3 report - and now we are down to just 7 runners + Bolton's near late comeback had a lot of lads worried. It gets harder from now on - remember only Premiership fixtures played on Sat/Sun/Mon count (with FA Cup matches next weekend the choices are more limited)

Week 4 report - and there were 4 !! Hard luck to the 3 lads on Villa but as we know a draw is no good so on to the sidelines they go. Don't worry BFC Last Man Standing will return next season - meanwhile best of luck to our remaining 4 players

Week 5 report - no fallers this week so 4 runners remaining - these guys are good at this game now ! Still 4 weeks left of the season to see if we get an outright winner - if not the prize will be shared between those remaining.

Week 6 report - still 4 players remaining as no casualties again this week - well done lads but you're starting to run out of good teams to pick from now !

Week 7 report - congratulations to Setchy (aka Keith Nolan) our first winner of Last Man Standing. Hard luck to all our other players but remember LMS will return in August. Spread the word as remember the more players we have the bigger the prize money. Thanks again to all for taking part & helping to raise some funds for the club.
